TEXT 1: THE BEST TETRIS PLAYER IN THE WORLD

1 My brother Andy and I are regular Tetris players. We've been playing Tetris on our PlayStation for ages. However, we were
2 absolutely amazed when we found a YouTube video of the Classic Tetris World Championship in 2018. The competitors used
3 classic 80s Nintendo consoles; their speed at making decisions was genius. We became hooked. I was ten, and Andy thirteen.
4 Three years later, we qualified for the Tetris world championships and then competed against each other for the title!
5 The championship had begun in 2010, but things got interesting in 2018 when a 16-year-old dethroned the world champion.
6 After that, we began to play competitively; we would shout our scores at each other from our bedrooms. We've always been into
7 electronics, and Dad taught us to code when we were five. I'm a straight-A student, and maths is my favourite subject, so gaming
8 fits the way my mind works.
9 The final took place on a Sunday. I had an old-school TV in my room and played from an office chair; my brother sat in an old
10 rocking chair. We played five games, and I won during the decisive match. Andy walked across the hall into my room and gave 11 me a high five. With the $3,000 prize money, I bought a guitar and invested in cryptocurrency. I've also set up my own tournament,
12 Classic Tetris Brawl, and now sell my own merchandising, too.
13 I wasn't well known at school before but now I'm "the Tetris guy". I usually play Tetris once a day when school and homework
14 are done. As a 13-year-old world champion, I know that the key to success is learning what makes other players better than you.

TEXT 2: PHOTOGRAPHING THE NORTHERN LIGHTS

1 The aurora borealis, also known as the Northern Lights, occurs as a result of energy released by solar magnetic fields that
2 expel large quantities of charged particles at high speed from the Sun. It can reach Earth in 24 to 72 hours and, if conditions are
3 right, the electrons and protons flow along the Earth's magnetic field to the polar regions where they interact with oxygen and
4 nitrogen to produce a magical red, green, and purple dancing light show in the night sky.

5 Peak northern lights season ranges from September to March. Although seeing the natural phenomenon requires a
6 complicated combination of events, Iceland is considered a spectacular location. For this reason, and with the primary objective of 7 increasing inbound tourism to the island, Hotel Rangá is searching for its first-ever official "lights catcher", a photographer who will
8 spend a month capturing photos and videos of the night sky's colours in exchange for room and food.

9 The chosen photographer will receive airfare to and from Iceland and must be available for three weeks from mid-September
10 to mid-October. The candidate must also have the ability to provide high-quality content, of which the hotel will retain the license.
11 The task should not be extremely challenging since the hotel is such a prime viewing spot that it has its own observatory with two 12 telescopes and a retractable roof. Moreover, local astronomers will join the guest.

13 To apply, photographers must fill out the online application, which includes questions about social media reach, photography
14 experience in darkness and previous travel in Iceland. Applicants also need to answer why they should become the hotel's lights
15 catcher. Additional information is provided on the Hotel Rangá website.

TEXT 1: JOSÉ ADOLFO QUISOCALA IS CHANGING THE WORLD

1 When he was seven, José Adolfo Quisocala created a bank for school friends in his hometown of Arequipa, Peru, to save money to buy books, stationery and uniforms. Now, nine years later, the Bartselana Student Bank has 6,700 customers, all aged under 18. All these children can add more money to their savings by taking plastic and paper to recycle to school bus stops —the money is automatically credited to their bank accounts. Every month, the bank recycles between 15 and 16 tons of paper and plastic.

6 The idea came to Quisocala when he saw children begging at traffic lights and wondered how he could help them and their families earn and save, and at the same time recycle household rubbish that would otherwise become litter. He left school to pursue his idea, but it was worth it, he says. "In my town, I considerably reduced the level of child poverty, the school drop-out rate and environmental pollution."

10 Quisocala also helped create the Bartselana Foundation, which turns donations of recyclable waste from local companies into funds to combat child hunger and improve education. The foundation has been making free online educational videos lately, which they put out via social media, explaining how to distinguish different types of plastic and paper for recycling, for example. "This is relevant information which is not taught at school so we make it public and free to watch," says Quisocala.

14 Now 16, he plans to pass the bank to another young executive in order to go to university. He intends to continue his social activism, working with the "least-favoured or forgotten groups in Latin America" and helping them benefit from carrying out environmental services.

TEXT 2: GARUM IN THE 21ST CENTURY

- 1 In modern laboratories, scientists are working to recreate garum, a sauce made from putrefying fish that was beloved by the
2 ancient Greeks and Romans but hardly sounds appealing to 21st-century food lovers.

3 The Latin term garum could refer to both a sauce used in the cooking process —sometimes also called liquamen— and to a
4 condiment, made with the blood and viscera of fish, that writers such as Petronius, Ausonius and Seneca knew as garum sociorum
5 (“garum of the allies”).

6 Archaeologists had been unsuccessful in extracting well-preserved garum at excavations in Tunisia and other Mediterranean
7 locations until Italian researchers in 2009 discovered six sealed dolia —large clay amphoras—in a building that they named the 8 Garum Shop at Pompeii. The eruption of Mount Vesuvius in AD 79 had buried the building under ash, thus perfectly preserving a 9 small liquamen factory.

10 Food technicians from the universities of Cadiz and Seville analysed the contents of the dolia at Pompeii and, using that
11 information and a liquamen recipe thought to have been written in the third century AD, produced what they claim is the first 12 scientific recreation of the 2,000-year-old fish sauce. This recreation is called Flor de Garum and is being sold in amphora-shaped
13 glass bottles throughout Spain. Chefs state that it supercharges dishes with a potent flavour.

14 It has been said that it is impossible to recreate definitive modern versions of these Roman ancient fish sauces, but at least 15 this is the first time in modern history that a scientific reconstruction of garum has been successfully achieved.

CHOOSE AND WRITE THE CORRECT OPTION (A, B, C or D). (0.5 points each)

(d) garum was made with fresh fish.

10. According to the text, Flor de Garum is made using...

(a) a recipe collected by Seneca and other classical writers.

(d) information gathered from excavations in Tunisia.

TEXT 1: IT'S A GOOD DAY TO BE A DOG!

- 1 If you're in the market for gourmet dog food these days, there are a lot of options for your puppy. I mean, if you've got bills to pay, you could buy a 10-kilo bag of chicken flavor for $10. But the brand Open Farm Pet offers a similar size bag of "Norwegian Salmon & Ancient Grains Dog Food" for $72. It does contain not only wild salmon, but also quinoa, chia seeds and superfoods like coconut oil and pumpkin.
- 5 Lately, every element of pet culture has changed: from food to medicine, training, travel... Dogs have come a long way since the days when they were put to work on farms and given food scraps. From spending their nights in the doghouse to sleeping inside on comfortable beds, they've made big progress. They get first-rate healthcare and visits to psychiatrists who prescribe them antidepressants. They get massages and spa days, and wear sweaters.
- 9 Dogs are also much less likely to be killed these days. During the 1990s, more than 10 million dogs were euthanized in America every year. According to the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA), euthanasia has fallen dramatically to about 670,000 dogs per year. The overwhelming majority of shelter dogs are now adopted rather than put down.
- 12 The comedian Jerry Seinfeld once suggested that if aliens were watching us with telescopes and saw our interactions with dogs, they might think dogs were the leaders: "If you see two life forms —one of them is making a poop, and the other is carrying it for them, who would you assume is in charge?"

TEXT 2: WOMEN'S RIGHT TO VOTE IN THE UNITED KINGDOM

1 It is a fact that, throughout history, there have been severe restrictions regarding human rights based on age, race, education,
2 social status and gender. During the early 20th century, men in the United Kingdom had the right to vote but women did not. Many
3 people—including many women—believed that females should not be allowed to vote. However, a group of women started to
4 campaign for women's rights, especially the right to vote. This became known as the Suffragist Movement, with two groups: the 5 Suffragists and the Suffragettes.

6 The Suffragists campaigned for votes for upper and middle-class women and believed in peaceful protest. The Suffragettes,
7 in contrast, were frustrated with the Suffragists' lack of results and created a more inclusive group in which women from all social
8 classes and races were welcomed. They began using more confrontational tactics to get people to listen. Many protesting 9 Suffragettes were arrested for law breaking and most of them went to prison.

10 In 1913, Suffragette Emily Davison stepped out in front of the King's racehorse during a race event and died tragically after 11 being trampled on. Emily's death and the cruel police treatment led to public anger, and the female cause gathered support. After 12 women's active help during World War I, no one dared to neglect their right to vote, which was approved in Parliament in 1918.

13 There is some divided opinion over the tactics the Suffragettes used to spread their message, but they paved the way for future
14 generations of women, and helped us all not only advance as a modern society but also make us aware of the importance of 15 history in our lives.

TEXT 1: IT'S NOT EASY TO BE GREEN

1 “I’ll try to eat less meat,” you think, as you pick up a plant-based alternative to your usual beef burger. Then you discover it’s almost double the price of the meaty version on the next shop shelf. “Sorry, meat wins.”
 2
 3 Supermarkets have expanded the range of meat-alternative products in the last five years, with a variety of items that would tempt any carnivore. There’s one problem, though: the price.
 4
 5 Plant-based options often cost more than regular meat products. Take Bird’s Eye nuggets as an example. A standard packet costs £1.55 at Tesco; the brand’s vegan choice is £2.50. So, why are they so pricey? Plant-based alternatives are a relatively new and developing part of the market, which means more money is spent on research and innovation to ensure they meet the demand for taste and quality. The good news is that the market is moving in the right direction. In December 2020, Plant & Bean opened Europe’s largest plant-based meat production facility in the UK to help drive down prices.
 6
 7 Supermarkets are also making changes. In April, Co-Op invested more than £1.7 million to reduce the cost of vegan food. As part of the move, its own-brand vegan sausages fell from £3 to £1.45. No ingredients were changed.
 8
 9 Until prices go down, the Vegan Society says it’s still possible to embrace a vegan lifestyle by choosing other products. Actually, it’s a misconception that vegan food is necessarily more expensive than animal products since some of the cheapest key components of a vegan diet are rice, pasta, vegetables and beans.
 10
 11 The Vegan Society hopes to increase access to affordable plant-based food and support vegans who find themselves in financial difficulty.

CHOOSE AND WRITE THE CORRECT OPTION (A, B, C or D). (0.5 points each)

1. According to the text, vegan products are...
 - (a) tasteless for any carnivore.
 - (b) often cheaper than meat products.
 - (c) appealing to non-vegan people too.
 - (d) hard to find.
2. According to the text, customers...
 - (a) can’t find meat alternative products in the supermarket.
 - (b) can still be green in spite of the high prices.
 - (c) can afford any product.
 - (d) choose the vegan alternative instead of Bird’s Eye nuggets.

3. The industry is trying to improve the flavour of vegan products.

TEXT 2: MEN EARN MORE MONEY THAN WOMEN IN EVERY COUNTRY

1 A new international study examining the difference in earnings within couples has revealed that men continue to be paid more
2 than women in every country.

3 In the first survey of its kind, scholars examined public data from 2.85 million households across 45 countries to reach their
4 conclusions. The report, published in the Journal of Economic Behavior & Organization, analysed the income of couples between 5 the ages of 18 and 65 over a four-decade period. The team wanted to assess the global picture, particularly in Scandinavian
6 countries, which are often presented as more progressive for females. However, the experts concluded that gender pay inequality
7 persists across countries, over time and across both rich and poor households. They found that the family unit is often a place of 8 great inequality, even in the most affluent nations.

9 One positive finding was that women's participation in the labour market had increased over the 40-year period. In many parts
10 of the world, more women-friendly policies have narrowed the gap. Nevertheless, the researchers felt that governments were not 11 doing enough.

12 In May 2020, on the fiftieth anniversary of the Equal Pay Act, the Trade Unions Congress (TUC) stated that women continue
13 to be underpaid and undervalued. General secretary of the TUC, Frances O'Grady, said: "Fifty years after brave women won the 14 legal right to equal pay, unequal earnings are still common today. Working women are stuck in low-paid and insecure jobs. No
15 doubt we need to reconsider how we value and reward their work. Without appropriate measures, it will take decades to close the 16 gender pay gap."

TEXT 1: A PIZZA FOR THE QUEEN

1 Pizza Margherita, whose toppings resemble the colours of the Italian flag, red (tomato), white (mozzarella) and green (basil), has an appealing story behind its name. It was created by Raffaele Esposito, a well-known pizza maker from Naples who owned a tavern called Pizzeria di Pietro e Basta Cosí. Tomato-based pizza was then considered the food of the poor people of Naples and mainly sold by the street vendors. In his book Le Coricollo, French author Alexandre Dumas noted the popularity of the tomato-and-fish-based pizzas sold in the streets of Naples. People would eat watermelons in summer and pizza throughout the year.
 2 According to the legend, Esposito was invited to the royal palace to prepare a pizza for Queen Margherita of Savoy, who had travelled to Naples with King Umberto I. Esposito prepared three different pizzas, one of which used a combination of tomatoes, mozzarella cheese and basil to emulate the red, white and green of the Italian flag. The Queen found this pizza absolutely delicious and she is said to have sent a note of appreciation to the pizza maker, who then named the pizza after the Queen.
 3 Although the authenticity of the story has been questioned by some people, it helped Neapolitan Pizza gain enduring popularity and the presentation and fine taste of Esposito's Pizza Margherita made it one of the most recognizable symbols of Italian food culture in the world. Some of the old traditional pizzerias still exist in Naples, and a trip to this capital city of the Campania region must certainly include a visit to its historic pizzerias for both pizza and history lovers.

TEXT 2: WILL THE MACHINES TAKE CONTROL?

1 The first time I interviewed Eric Schmidt —twelve years ago when he was the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of Google—I had a simple question about the technology that is spying and monetizing all our movements, opinions, relationships and tastes. “Friend or enemy?” I asked. “We’re friends,” Schmidt replied coolly.

4 Now that the former Google executive has a book out titled The Age of Artificial Intelligence, I made him the same question about Artificial Intelligence (AI), “Friend or enemy?”. “AI is imprecise, and it can be unreliable as a partner,” he replied. “It’s dynamic since it’s changing all the time. It’s emergent and does things you don’t expect. And, most importantly, it’s capable of learning.”

7 “It will be everywhere,” continues Schmidt. “How may a child feel about having an AI programmed robot? What does AI war look like? Does AI perceive aspects of reality that we don’t? Is it possible that AI will see things that humans cannot comprehend?”

9 Some scientists believe that when we build AI without a kill bottom for it, we are creating a demon—with luck, humans could 10 end up as the family pets. On this point, Schmidt disagrees with those people who consider that by developing AI, eventually, you’ll 11 finish up with a master robot that’s 1,000 times smarter than the humans. “My answer is different. I think that these AI systems are 12 going to think, not like humans, but they’re going to be very smart, and that we’re going to have to coexist.”

13 I asked, “You don’t think Siri and Alexa are going to kill us one night?”. “No,” he replied. “But they might become your child’s 14 best friend.”

TEXT 1: BUSKING: STREET MUSICIANS IN DUBLIN

1 People who come to Dublin for the first time may be surprised by the huge number of street performers or buskers, especially on the tourist-packed Grafton Street. They have become part of Dublin's cultural life.
 2 Musicians from all over the world compete to be heard on Grafton Street, playing everything from authentic Irish folk to modern punk. Playing on Grafton Street isn't like any other busking experience. It's one of the busiest streets in Europe, with over 9,000 pedestrians passing through every hour —each one could be receptive or rude, generous or quite the opposite.
 3 The increased popularity of busking in Dublin has also brought with it legislation; performers pay for the privilege to play on Grafton Street (a permit costs €30 a year) and follow strict regulations. Each busker can only play for one hour before moving on and can't return within 100 metres of any of their previous locations until the following day.
 4 The musicians queue, sometimes for hours, for one of the best-designated spots. They're also in direct competition with other buskers along the street playing at the same time, which ensures that everyone who performs here puts their full heart and soul into it.
 5 A unique interrelation between buskers and fans occurs only in the streets, with no security staff, no VIP seats, or entrance fee. Christmas Eve, for instance, is a really good time to visit Grafton Street, as megastars like Bono and Glen Hansard have been known to turn up and play for charity. If you like what you're hearing, leave a tip —€2 or €3 is typical, but more is obviously welcomed, especially if you stay for a while.

 - (c) play Irish music.
 - (d) pay every day they perform.

TEXT 2: A THOUSAND HUTS

1 Sustainability is a hot topic in the world of travel right now, but what does it actually mean? Everyone seems to have a different
2 idea about what we should focus on. From electric cars and bicycles to slow food and zero-plastic hotels, there are countless
3 factors that make a trip more sustainable. That's where Scotland's 1,000 Hut programme comes in. This initiative started in 2011,
4 after a brainstorming session among Scottish environmental activists. Since then, they have been working with Reforesting
5 Scotland to make cabins an alternative holiday destination, particularly for eco-conscious travellers who are fond of a minimalist
6 holiday.

7 It could be a positive change in the way we holiday from now on, the initiative believes. Rather than trying to organise one
8 large holiday a year in Spain or Greece, a family could find it easier to come to a smaller, closer rural Scottish hut whenever they 9 need a break from the frenetic pace of urban life.

10 What the programme hopes is that "people will learn about and engage with nature, taking responsibility for the environment."
11 The experience includes travelling to the cabins in low-carbon, sustainable ways that could make visitors more appreciative of the 12 world around them. Besides, it's also a way of promoting local travel.

13 Increasing the number of simple, low-waste huts in the British countryside will also serve the larger number of people travelling
14 within the UK. In this way, Scotland could position itself as a favourite closer destination. More people in rural communities means
15 more money flowing into those communities, and the more people are enjoying the countryside, the more financially equipped we'll 16 be to preserve it.

TEXT 1: IT BEGAN 50 YEARS AGO

1 The ABBA story began in Sweden more than five decades ago. In 1966, Björn met Benny for the first time. Björn was a member of a well-known folk music group, while Benny played keyboards in Sweden's biggest pop band of the 1960s. They wrote their first song just some weeks later, and by the end of the decade they had established a regular partnership as composers. In 1969, Björn and Benny met the two women who were to become not only their fiancées but also the other half of ABBA, Agnetha and Anni-Frid. In 1974, 'Waterloo' took them straight to the Eurovision finals in England. By this time, they had changed their name to ABBA, an acronym of their first names. ABBA was also the brand of a Swedish canned fish company which agreed to lend their name to this pop group.
 2 By 1976, ABBA had already established themselves as one of the most prevalent groups in the world. This was followed by a smashing concert tour of Europe and Australia between January and March 1977. At the end of 1982, after many worldwide hits and 9 their respective divorces, ABBA decided to take a break. If they wanted to, they reasoned, they could always get back together after a few years. This "temporary break" resulted in more than thirty years of silence.
 11 In 2010, the former couples authorized a touring exhibition and interactive experience called ABBAWorld, held in London, where they gave interviews and donated some personal items. In January 2016, a show-concept, Mamma Mia, opened in Stockholm. This was the first opportunity in three decades to capture the four members together exclusively in one and the same photograph.

TEXT 2: COLOUR PSYCHOLOGY

1 The psychology of colour is based on the mental and emotional effects colours have on sighted people in all facets of life.
 2 These reactions are rooted in cultural and personal experiences and are conditioned by the situational context. If you have ever
 3 felt uneasy in a yellow room, or relaxed and calm while looking at the sky, this will sound familiar.
 4 Contrary to what one may think, little theoretical or empirical work has been conducted to date on colour's influence on
 5 psychological functioning. Despite that, it has become a hot topic in marketing, art, design and other areas since researchers and 6 experts have made a few important discoveries and observations about the effect colour has on moods, feelings and behaviours.
 7 Additionally, colours are powerful tools of communication. For instance, colour preferences, from the clothes we wear to the 8 car we drive, can sometimes make a statement about how we want other people to perceive us. Other factors such as age and 9 gender can also influence the colour choices we make.
 10 Besides, there is some proof that certain colours can even affect our performance. For example, one study has shown that 11 exposing students to red colour before being examined impacts the test score negatively. More specifically, 71 college students
 12 were given a participant number before they took a five-minute test. The numbers were coloured either black, green or red, and 13 the results proved that students who got red-coloured numbers scored approximately 20% lower than other participants.
 14 However, this evidence is mostly anecdotal and colours can be subjective. Therefore, additional research is needed for us to 15 have deeper comprehension of the different psychological effects of colour.

TEXT 1: THE HERMITAGE CATS

1 It is well documented that St Petersburg's Hermitage Museum in Russia is home to some of the world's greatest artistic treasures; but less well known is that an army of cats has been guarding those treasures since 1745. In that year, Empress 2 Elizaveta Petrovna signed a decree ordering that cats were to be brought to her court —“the best cats, the largest ones, able to 3 catch mice, and accompanied by a person who will look after their health.”
4 Since then, there has always been a substantial number of museum cats. There were some ‘catless’ years during the Second 5 World War, but they were reintroduced soon after its end: museum legend has it that a special train travelled nationwide to recruit 6 suitable felines for service.
7 Nowadays, the cats which live in the Hermitage Museum number around 50 and are considered to be museum employees.
8 Actually, each animal has a ‘passport’ with its photograph! New arrivals are vaccinated and most are castrated to prevent 9 disproportionate proliferation. The felines also have their own washing machine, and those that leave the museum to be rehomed 10 receive a special Hermitage certificate, which gives them a certain distinction.
11 There are even three women who have full-time jobs looking after the cats, and they know all their names. “Cats are a part of 12 our life,” says one. “They amuse people and create a nice atmosphere for us.”
13 Last year, a French philanthropist left part of his inheritance to the cats. Yes, specifically the cats, not the museum. Apparently,
14 the Frenchman was so taken with the cute animals that he left a “small sum” to them after his death, CNN reported.

TEXT 2: WOULD YOU LIKE TO LIVE FOR 1,000 YEARS?

1 Centuries ago, Spanish explorer Ponce de León spent his life searching for the Fountain of Youth, which was believed to
2 restore youth to whoever drank from or bathed in it. Today, some scientists are keeping the dream alive. They are convinced that
3 genetic engineering, or the discovery of anti-ageing drugs, could extend human life far beyond its natural course. Indeed, Australian
4 geneticists believe such a pill could be as close as 10 years away, and other researchers think there is no reason why humans
5 cannot live for at least 1,000 years.

6 Those who want to live as long as possible would welcome this kind of research. But many philosophers and ethicists are 7 sceptical about the implications of longer lives, both for the individual and society.

8 Leon Kass, a bioethicist, wonders if life would be as serious or meaningful without a mortality limit. He believes that an end
9 point encourages us to make the most of our time, to live it passionately and struggle to achieve our goals in the short time we 10 have.

11 Philosopher Temkin expresses another worry. Our ability to remember is probably limited. As we age, we tend to forget many 12 things that happened time ago in our lives. Perhaps people who live for 1,000 years will forget altogether what they did in the 13 earlier parts of their existence.

14 Other critics fear that life-prolonging treatments may not be available to everyone. The rich will be able to afford them while the 15 poor won't. But let's say most of us could extend our lives. If we all continued to have children, the world would be even more 16 overpopulated than today, and job opportunities for younger generations would be reduced.

CHOOSE AND WRITE THE CORRECT OPTION (A, B, C or D). (0.5 points each)

9. According to the text, Ponce de León...

- | | |
|---|--|
| (a) there would be more job offers. | (b) poverty wouldn't be a problem anymore. |
| (c) overpopulation wouldn't raise an issue. | (d) young people might be unemployed. |
